

This cheat sheet is the aftermath of hours upon hours of research on all of the teams in this year's tournament field. I've listed each team's win and loss record, their record against the spread totals, and their record in the last ten games. Also included are the leading scorers along with symbols for upperclass point guards, high scoring big men, team scoring averages and point differentials. Teams with the most symbols have the best chances at making deep runs. Keep in mind that very few teams have won it all with young point guards and/or low scoring post players. Be considerate of free throw percentages as teams rarely make the second weekend laying bricks at the line. Also, no team has ever won the national title without three players averaging double digits in points. While filling out your brackets, try and select teams that are playing good basketball lately (look at the L10 numbers) as well as teams that have multiple scoring options. Picking teams like ASU and Oklahoma State might not be the best idea since the majority of their offense revolves around one player. Best of luck to all and enjoy the tourney.
